Createspace, United States, 2014. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 229 x 152 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .VOLUNTEERS ARE A powerful force for good in the world. Millions give their time, effort and money to charitable causes such as feeding the poor, educating the uneducated, tending the sick and fighting for the dignity and rights of their fellow men, women and children. Today, doctors, dentists and nurses pay their own way to sail floating hospitals to places like Africa and Southeast Asia. They treat thousands of people in places where modern medicine is practically unknown. Former presidents and leaders of nations have picked up a trowel and hammer to build houses, AIDS clinics and roads and inspired others to join them. Volunteers dig wells for villages that need clean water. Entrepreneurs have brought solar and wind power to places that electric wires have failed to reach. They ve created a system of writing and taught literacy in villages that have never had a written language before. They ve made micro-loans to women and men to help them create small businesses in countries where more people are unemployed than have jobs. Tens of thousands of teachers, mission workers and other volunteers have helped educate millions out of poverty. There are a thousand ways to help. Fund-raising is just one, but it is one of the more fundamental ways to help do good in the world. Every effort to provide aid and relief to those who are suffering and in need starts with the money needed to fund it. Food must be found and transported. Aid stations have to be built. Rescued animals need to be fed. It all costs money. One of the major ways volunteers become involved in charities and efforts to do some good...
