For eighteen years it has pressed on my mind, that essential principles of thermodynamics have been overlooked by those geologists who uncompromisingly oppose all paroxysmal hypotheses, and maintain not only that we have examples now before us, on the earth, of all the different actions by which its crust has been modified in geological history, but that these actions have never, or have not on the whole, been more violent in past time than they are at present. 2. It is quite certain the solar system cannot have gone on, even as at present, for a few hundred thousand or a few million years without the irrevocable loss (by dissipation, not by annihilation) of a very considerable proportion of the entire energy initially in store for sun heat, and for plutonic action. It is quite certain that the whole store of energy in the solar system has been greater in all past time than at present; but it...
