The two layers of integument in insects, c, may be separated mechanically, or by maceration in dilute hydrochloric acid. Eyes.--Many objects of interest may be obtained from the eyes of various animals; as the crystalline lens, the pigment, the ciliary processes, the retina, and the membrane of Jacob. The structure of the crystalline lens in fish is best seen after the lens itself has been hardened by drying, boiling, or long maceration in spirit. After having peeled off the outside, the more dense interior will be found to split up into concentric laminae, and each lamina will also be found to be composed of an aggregation of toothed fibres; these are best seen when mounted in fluid, but if dyed, they will show very well in balsam. The pigment is easily obtained by opening a fresh eye under water. It may then be detached as a separate layer, and parts of it floated on slides to dry, after which they may be mounted in balsam. The ciliary processes are best seen when injected; they should be mounted in a convenient cell with fluid, and viewed as opaque objects. The retina should be examined from a very fresh eye, between glasses, and a little serum or aqueous humor added, to allow the parts to be well displayed; but water must be avoided, as the nervous matter will be considerably altered by it; the membrane of Jacob will also require the same precautions, but...
